

The Indianapolis Airport Authority Announces Selection of Business Development Analyst

Maggie Bishop

INDIANAPOLIS, IN – Following a nationwide search, the Indianapolis Airport Authority has selected Maggie Bishop to be the Business Development Analyst at the Indianapolis International Airport. Bishop will begin her new position on January 4, 2016.

In her new role, Bishop will be responsible for supporting analysis for all air service, business development, properties and commercial enterprise initiatives. Additionally, she will sustain and move forward commercial enterprise strategies through data collection, feasibility studies analysis, marketing development and reporting as well as other supporting services towards the success of the IAA's air service and properties programs. Bishop will support the business development function with implementing programs that increase commercial and cargo air traffic service to the community as well as other ancillary revenue as taken on by business development and properties.

Bishop's economic development experience has been largely in Austin, Texas, where she most recently served as the Director of Clean Energy & Power Technology at Greater Austin Chamber of Commerce. Prior to that, Bishop was the Chamber's Director of Business Retention & Expansion.

Bishop was the Founding Member of the World Economic Forum Global Shaper - Austin Hub and served on the Board of Directors for both the CleanTX Foundation and the Pecan Street Project, the world's preeminent research network of energy and water customers.

Bishop has a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics from the Southwestern University in Georgetown, TX.

This search was conducted by ADK Executive Search, a retained executive search firm specializing exclusively in searches for the aviation community.

###