The Airport

Tampa International Airport is a public airport six miles west of Downtown Tampa, in Hillsborough County, Florida. This airport is publicly owned by Hillsborough County Aviation Authority. It has been praised for its architecture and Landside/Airside design of a central terminal connected by people movers to satellite gates, a pioneering concept when designed in the late 1960s.

The Hillsborough County Aviation Authority is an independent special district of the State of Florida, established by the 1945 Florida Legislature with exclusive jurisdiction, control, supervision and management over all publicly owned airports in Hillsborough County.

The Aviation Authority is governed by a five-member Board of Directors. Three members are residents of Hillsborough County appointed by the Governor of the State of Florida for four-year terms. The Mayor of the City of Tampa and a board member of the County Commissioners of Hillsborough County serve ex officio on the board. The gubernatorial appointments occur at two-year intervals, and at these times the Board reorganizes itself, electing officers for the ensuing two years.

Southwest Airlines carries the largest share of TPA passengers, operating a peak-season schedule of over 90 daily departures. The airport presently serves 86 non-stop destinations, including international service to the Bahamas, Canada, Germany, Mexico, Panama, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, Iceland, and to destinations throughout the Caribbean. Tampa is also one of only a handful of airports offering non-stop service to Havana, Cuba, as well as charter operations to Holguín and Santa Clara. The Airport hosted nearly 19-million passengers in 2016, and is the 29th largest Airport in the U.S. for enplanements according to the FAA.

Tampa International Airport relies on two fixed-base operators on the airport campus and operates three general aviation airports elsewhere in Hillsborough. The three off-campus airports also form a reliever airport network to allow for safe, efficient and timely commercial operations at Tampa International.

In late 2011, Tampa International Airport officials began the process of updating the Master Plan for the airport's 3,300-acre campus. The final plan, approved in 2013, outlines three phases of expansion to accommodate 35 million passengers each year, more than double the current number of annual passengers. It allows a "build as demand dictates" approach to growth, with phases based on passenger volume. The first phase addresses the immediate needs to decongest the curbsides, roads and main terminal. It includes a 2.3 million-square-foot consolidated rental center near the entrance to the airport, a 1.4-mile automated people mover and an expansion of the main terminal. The $943 million project is expected to create or save nearly 9,000 construction-related jobs.

Master Plan Fast Facts:

- 2.3-million square foot rental car center
- 1.4-mile Automated People Mover
- 50,000-square-foot expansion of the main terminal
- Adds 2,414 spaces to existing Long Term Parking Garage
- Removes 2.7 million cars from airport roads each year
- Cost: $943 million
- Anticipate spending more than $120 million with women-owned, minority-owned and disadvantaged businesses
- Will create or save 9,000 construction-related jobs
