Ogden City Names Brian Condie, C.M., as Airport Director

OGDEN, UT – Ogden City has appointed Brian Condie, C.M., as Airport Director for Ogden-Hinckley Airport (OGD). Mr. Condie brings over two decades of experience in airport safety, administration, planning, and economic development, making him the ideal leader to guide the Airport into a new era of growth and innovation. He will begin his new position on September 23, 2024.

In his new role, Mr. Condie will oversee the safety, administration, planning, and development of all airport operations, with a strategic focus on expanding both commercial and private aviation. Looking forward to the 2034 Winter Olympics and beyond, he will lead critical initiatives, including safe and secure operations, business recruitment, executive air travel services, lease negotiations, strategic planning, and fiscal management—all aimed at enhancing the regional economy.

A nationwide search for a new airport manager positions Ogden for success and responds to key recommendations from a recent legislative audit. "It is paramount to our community that during our nationwide search we found the best candidate who would focus on safety and excellence in airport operations. We are thrilled to welcome Brian Condie to our team," said Ogden Mayor Ben Nadolski. "His extensive experience and forward-thinking approach make him the perfect fit to lead our airport into the future."

Before joining Ogden-Hinckley Airport, Mr. Condie served as Airport Director at Rifle Airport in Colorado. There, he secured and managed federal and state grants, increased airport revenue, and established a self-sustaining financial structure. His tenure included overseeing a multi-year runway realignment and introducing advanced aviation technologies, earning him a commendation from the Colorado Governor. Mr. Condie also played a crucial role in executive aviation operations in Salt Lake City during the 2002 Winter Olympics.

"I am honored to join Ogden-Hinckley Airport and eager to work with the dedicated team here," Mr. Condie said. "With a focus on safety, security, and service, I look forward to building on the airport's strong foundation and enhancing its role as a key transportation hub for our region."

Mr. Condie received a bachelor's degree in Business Administration with a focus on Aviation from Utah State University and is a Certified Member (C.M.) of the American Association of Airport Executives. He has earned the ACE-Finance and Airport Security Coordinator designations and was named Colorado Aviation Professional of the Year in 2020.
